ABOUT

19TH EIASM INTERDISCIPLINARY CONFERENCE

GRENOBLE, FRANCE - SEPTEMBER 19-20, 2024

This Conference follows the adoption, in July 2023, by the European Commission, of the first delegated act that sets out cross-cutting standards for the disclosure of Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) information.

The sustainability reporting revolution has started and further guidance is now expected to address its implementation challenges that relate to the definition and the content of material sustainability/ESG information, to how to collect the required sustainability/ESG information, or to what form of communication should be employed, including in what digital form.

To address those issues, an interdisciplinary conversation seems instrumental. Hence, the ambition of the Grenoble conference is in creating an unprecedented opportunity for cross-disciplinary exchanges that will assist regulators, preparers, and all users of the upcoming sustainability reporting.

This makes of the concept of “values creation” – rather than single value creation, a multi-perspective, multi-stakeholders, multi-dimension, multi-time horizon, multi-intangibility concept that deploys various objectives yet to structure. Hence, company ecosystems, more than ever, need academic support to drive the transition from a purely shareholder oriented perception of value to a stakeholder and sustainability-infused vision.
